Musky Size Limit On Lake Redstone in Sauk Co.

The Problem:

Muskies are being killed before they are at a good spawning size, Redstone has too small of a size limit. People also mistake Muskies as Northerns and keep them. Fishermen don't realize what a big Musky is. Other states realize this and are putting 50 inch limits in place. This puts the world record from Wisconsin in jeopardy, all the while the musky is our state fish.

The Lake Redstone has extremely great potential for growing big Muskies due to the forage base. We should take advantage of this more.

The Solution:

We at Muskies Matter for Sauk and Juneau counties call upon the conservation congress, with all of its might to work with the DNR to educate people around the lake by placing info at boat landings, explaining differences between Northerns and Muskies, size limits, proper handling, and changing the Muskie size limit to 50 inches.
