Permanent Disabled Hunting Privileges With A One Time Diagnosis From A Physician.

Any person that is diagnosed with a permanent disability should only have to provide a Physician's proof of permanent disability one time for the rest of their lives. It is much too costly to have to prove a permanent disability more than one time in a person's life, and no reason for this action if a Physician says the person's disability will never go away in that person's lifetime.

BE IT RESOLVED, that the Conservation Congress recommends that a permanently disabled person only have to show a Physician's proof of their permanent disability one time in their life time.
