The Problem:

When farmers are experiencing crop damage from deer, they can receive "ag" tags that allow them to remove a certain number of deer from their farms, to protect their crops.

If woodland owners are experiencing damage to their woodland (especially following a logging operation) by deer browsing on regenerating saplings, they may lose their new crop of trees.

Therefore be it resolved, at the Conservation Congress annual meeting April 11th 2016 in Waupaca Co. That the Dept of Natural Resources take action by allowing woodland owners the opportunity to apply for deer damage tags to protect their woodlands.
