News » Appleton signs on as Green Tier charter

Dec. 2, 2010
Several communities around the state are pledging to focus on sustainability, and Appleton is one of them.

Mayor Tim Hanna made the city one of the charter members of the DNR's Green Tier program for municipalities during an event yesterday afternoon.

Hanna says in part, the initiative is recognizing steps that city officials have already taken to save money and conserve resources at the same time.

He says they also have a good working relationship with the DNR.

In all, five communities signed on as charter members.

DNR secretary Matt Frank says it's an expansion of the five-year-old Green Tier program for businesses.

The program encourages municipalities to meet their economic and infrastructure needs, while conserving resources.
